TRADE UNION RIGHTS

FOR LIDL STAFF

Usdaw is campaigning to get trade union rights for Lidl staff. Many employees in the stores and distribution centres have already joined Usdaw but Lidl is refusing to recognise the trade union.

Lidl says it is committed to “listening intently” to everyone in the business “from cocoa farmer to shelf stacker”. If that is the case why is Lidl refusing to listen to the trade union that represents the employees?

Lidl wants to encourage “trust and loyalty” from its customers. But what about showing some trust and loyalty to employees by recognising their trade union?

Lidl have been advertising that they are not just about low prices they also offer a quality service. Why not offer quality jobs with the right to join a trade union?

If you work for Lidl we strongly advise you to join Usdaw. We want a trade union in Lidl so we can negotiate better pay and conditions, proper breaks, better notification and fewer changes to shifts and improved health and safety.
